Tour de force: NYC's best design galleries to visit

DESIGN / 6 JUN 2016 / By DAISY ALIOTO

When Jean Lin's gallery Colony first launched in 2014 we applauded its dedication to putting designers first. Pictured: Colony's Tribeca space

New York City is saturated with art, but it's not just on the walls. The city's design scene has never been stronger as a new generation of hip creatives (and not all in Brooklyn) cultivate their own taste in furniture, lighting and the well-crafted objects that turn a room into a visual sanctuary. While in the city, we recommend you stop by these galleries for inspiration and your next showpiece:

Espasso

Espasso is a mecca for mid-century and contemporary Brazilian design, showcasing icons likes Carlos Motta and the Campana brothers. The proud legacy of Brazilian modernism is now inspiring a new generation. In fact, Espasso has expanded their Tribeca home and posted up in Miami.

38 N Moore St, New York, NY 10013; For more information visit the Espresso website
